Aviation's Benefit for Florida

Florida's economic well-being is intrinsically entwined with its vibrant airport system and its robust aviation industry. The aviation system in Florida allows the state to capitalize on an increasingly global marketplace. Aviation in Florida both sustains and leads economic growth and development. Airports in Florida are important economic engines, and support vital health, welfare, emergency, and safety-related services.

Florida's system of commercial service and general aviation airports are important to businesses throughout the state. Air travel is essential to tourism, Florida's number one industry. Protecting and investing in airports throughout Florida will support the aviation industry and the economic benefits described in this report. With continued support, Florida's dynamic aviation system will continue to provide a significant economic return in the years to come.

Keystone Airpark

Located on the county line between southern Clay and Bradford Counties, approximately 55 miles southwest of Jacksonville, Keystone Airpark serves many types of general aviation activities. With its two converging runways, the longest of which is 5,044 feet, the airpark can accommodate most general aviation business jet aircraft. The airpark's terminal is ideal for serving local users as well as those visiting the area.

The airpark's tenants include Express Air, a flight school; and Keystone Air LLC, a skydiving business. Fixed base operator services are provided by the Keystone Airpark Authority. Aside from flight training activity, corporate and business-related activity is becoming more common at the airpark. Local companies that use the airpark's facilities include Griffin Industries, Camp Blanding, Express Air, European Rally & Performance Driving School, and Aquila Aviation. All of the airpark's tenants and flight activities are important to the airpark's revenue streams and economic impact.

The annual economic impact of Keystone Airpark is associated with direct impacts that come from the tenants/businesses located at the airpark and construction projects that are undertaken by the airpark or by the on-site businesses. Indirect impacts are associated with spending from visitors who arrive in the area via general aviation aircraft.
